Women in Stock Speculations. Baltimore Sun.

In an interview with a reporter Mr. J. J. Hill, in speaking of the wild excitement in Wall Street the other day and its deplorable results, said:

"I expect before long that people will stop selling that which they haven't got and can't get, and then we'll get down to a satisfactory business basis."

Selling what you haven't got and can't get is a method of gambling far more dangerous and hurtful to the public morals and welfare than any other game of chance. It has been observed that in all the excitement and panic and inflation and collapse of values there has been not one important failure. Commenting on this fact, a writer in a New York paper declares that although this is true the loss has been as severe as that which took place on Black Friday, thirty-two years ago. The difference then was that rich banking firms failed in rapid succession, and this time it is the small fortunes that have been wiped out. Thousands of men and women who deemed it easy to get rich quick ventured all they had and lost all. A few, unloaded in time, but the great number of them were in the crash. Havoc was wrought with the savings of bank clerks, office boys, typewriters and bookkeepers. One of the saddest features of the whole miserable business is that so many women succumbed to the spirit of gambling and lost all they had. Many had borrowed money to bet with and lost it. The scenes in the offices of some of the offices of the brokers were pitiful. Great numbers of women would be standing around the tickers watching prices going down and their money slipping away from them, in many cases all they had. Their grief was extreme and uncontrollable.

In the modern civilization of cities money stands for so much and means so much that the greed of gain is the master passion. Women need money to gratify their social ambition and men want wealth for the importance it gives them. The acquisition by ordinary work or through the usual vocations of life is too slow. It takes a lifetime to grow rich by such means, and so one wants to wait. Few are contented with what they have, and the easiest and quickest way to get money is to take it away from someone else without giving him anything in return. This can be accomplished quickly and more respectably, in the public estimation, by stock gambling than at the faro table, but in point of morals there is no manner of difference. That women should take to gambling or stock jobbing and speculating is worse than for men to engage in such business, just as it is worse for women to drink whiskey than for men to drink. A woman is more nervous than a man, more excited by winning and more likely to be driven to despair by losses, and hence for their own happiness and for the sake of the homethy they should keep out of gambling as they would keep away from an accursed thing.

THE RIVERSIDE STRIKE.

Has Been On For 38 Days—Business Men Feeling It.

Danville, Va., May 11.—The strike of the operatives of the Riverside Cotton Mills for the 10-hour system is still on, and the textile union officials state they are bound to win, although it is the opinion of many the backbone of the strike has been broken by so many of them returning to work. At least 500 have done so. The mill officials decline to talk, and Mr. F. X. Burton, the president, in reply to an inquiry if the mills would take all the strikers back who wished to accept the 11-hour system, stated that they left on their own accord and could return in the same manner, as the mills were not soliciting operatives at the present. It is estimated that about 1,500 people are still on the strike, but the list is growing smaller day by day, and that merchants are losing is evidenced by many of them cutting off part of their force, offering them their situations back when the strike closes. The strike has been on for 38 days.

NOW OUT OF A JOB.

Stenographer Offered to Sell Private Papers in the Neely Case and Was Neatly Trapped.

Washington, May 11.—An attempt to sell the confidential communications between the Attorney General and the Secretary of War, in the Neely case, was unearthed today by Chief Wilkie of the secret service. Information had been obtained from John D. Lindsay, counsel for Neely, in New York, who had received a letter signed "John B. Dickenson," offering him copies of the correspondence. Mr. Lindsay turned the matter over to the Attorney General and the latter placed the case in the hands of Chief Wilkie.

An officer was stationed at the general delivery window of the local post-office, and when a man presented himself and asked for mail for John B. Dickenson he was followed. He went to the insular division of the War Department. Shortly afterwards a conference was held between the Secretary of War, Solicitor General Richards, of the Department of Justice, Colonel Edwards, chief of the insular bureau, and Chief Wilkie. It was discovered that the man representing himself as John B. Dickenson was Wm. Davis Williams, stenographer to Colonel Edwards, a position which he had held for a year past. He at one time was private secretary to ex-Congressman Brumm, of Pennsylvania, and came here from Minersville, Pa. Williams volunteered to turn the correspondence that he had attempted to sell to Lindsay over to the officials here. As the sale of the correspondence had not been completed no charge was made against Williams, but he was summarily dismissed by the Secretary of War.

The papers which Williams desired to sell to Mr. Lindsay consisted of the draft of the opinion of the Attorney General upon questions submitted by Mr. Lindsay, relative to requisition testimony in the Neely case. The opinion was prepared by an assistant attorney familiar with the Neely case, and submitted to Secretary Root for consideration and observation. There also was a letter from Secretary Root to the Attorney General. These papers Williams offered for $200.

CLEANED OUT BUCKET SHOP.

Man Wanted the Money He Won and Got It With a Shotgun.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dispatch, 10th.

William Bradburn, former champion heavyweight pugilist of Illinois and brother of James Bradburn, of Chicago once chief cattle buyer for Armour & Co., created a stampede today in a Pittsburg bucket shop with a loaded shot gun. He had been dealing in July corn in the East End branch of A. B. Baxter & Co., bucket shop men, and yesterday he closed out his trades and found himself $800 to the good. Bradburn asked for his money and was told that he would have to get it at the main office down town. He called there in the afternoon and was informed, so he says, that the firm did not consider itself responsible for the East End house's debts.

"I'll give you till tomorrow to settle," said Bradburn.

This morning Bradburn called again and approached the desk, but was waved aside and told not to begin the subject again. He walked away, bought a $50 shot gun, put in two shells loaded with buckshot and went back to Baxter's. The room was crowded and there was a general stampede of customers. Left alone with Baxter and his partner Bradburn pointed his gun and gave them ten minutes to count out $800. The money was counted down and Bradburn pocketed it just as a patrol wagon load of policemen brought by a riot call arrived.

Bradburn gave himself up and deposited $40 as a forfeit for his appearance tomorrow at a hearing for disorderly conduct. Baxter says he will not prosecute the man.

NEW UNIFORM FOR TOMMY.

British Soldiers Will Soon Be Provided with Fawn-Colored Serge Suits.

It is probable that in a very brief period there will be considerable changes made in the material used for clothing the army on home as well as on foreign service, says the London Telegraph. The committee dealing with the subject, which has been in session for about a couple of years, has at length been able to come to a final decision. Probably the events in South Africa have helped the members to make up their minds. At all events they have chosen an excellent woolen serge-like material in which for the future practically the whole work of the troops will be performed. It is not khaki-colored, though that well-known and serviceable hue is somewhat closely approached. Trousers will not be made from exactly the same material as the jacket, but of one somewhat rougher and thicker in texture. The new material is of a yellowish-fawn color and is of excellent quality. It was selected from a great number of samples submitted to the committee and has been approved by the war office. Two other materials of the same tint, but of rather stronger texture, have been selected for the mounted branches, and a stout Bedford cord of the same color will be used for riding breeches. No regulation dealing with the new clothing has yet been issued, but one may be expected shortly, and from thenceforward uniforms made of the new cloth will supersede the serges and dark cloth trousers now worn for drill and field work, both at home and abroad. The same pattern of jacket will be used for all branches of the service, but each unit will wear a distinguishing badge on the cap and shoulder strap.

It is not, however, intended that the new clothing shall entirely supersede the old style of dress. The tunic is to be worn for full dress, so that on full-dress parades the familiar blue and scarlet and black will still greet the eye. Of course, it will be a considerable time yet before the uniform will be ready, but it is probable that the spring issue of clothing to the troops will include the new suit. It will be more handsome than khaki, while it will be far more comfortable and serviceable, and so far as experiments go to show it will possess equal invisibility. It is to be hoped that a suitable headdress may soon be devised for the army. The helmets worn by the regular troops in South Africa are excellent and greatly superior to the much-vaunted "smasher" felt hat, but they are hardly suitable for home wear. A peaked cap of the new cloth, picked out with scarlet lines and made somewhat approaching the Russian pattern, would look very smart and be suitable for general wear. At all events the ridiculous forage and field service caps should be relegated to the museums, along with the blue and scarlet serges now about to be superseded by the new uniform.

YOUNG KRUGER IS A HERO.

Grandnephew of the Boer Ex-President Saved a Starving Sheep.

An English clergyman has had the extreme hardship of relating an anecdote in a Dublin paper that reflects great credit upon a near relative, a grandnephew, of England's arch enemy, Paul Kruger. He was staying at Glendalough with two friends and while boating on the upper lake, under Camaderry mountain, noticed a sheep pitifully bleating on a ledge about 1,000 feet up the sheer cliff. The animal had been there for days and was in a state of semi-starvation. The peasants about had resolved to shoot it and thus end its misery. Young Kruger however, essayed its rescue. He tied a piece of tarred twine round the sole of his boots and climbed up the face of the precipice, much to the anxiety of his friends. The operation took him quite two hours, during which the slightest unsteadiness or wavering would have cost him his life. Halfway up he shouted down that he could not move further. With a final effort, however, he gradually worked his way up, reached the animal and lowered it cautiously until he regained the boat. His intrepid act excited intense admiration among the spectators. His task seemed utterly impossible and in any event was attended with terrible danger. Young Kruger was at the time a medical student at Edinburgh university and on the declaration of war sailed for South Africa.

Unintentional!

A London exquisite went into a West End restaurant and was far from pleased with the manner in which his order was filled. "Do you call that a cutlet?" he demanded of the waiter. "Why, such a cutlet as that is an insult to every self-respecting calf in the British empire." The waiter hung his head for a moment, but recovered himself and said, in a tone of respectful apology: "I really didn't intend to insult you, sir." Youth's Companion.

The Skin AN INDEX TO THE BLOOD

Millions of little glands or tubes connect the blood with the skin, and through these small drain pipes perspiration passes out, carrying with it the impurities that are thrown off by the blood. Should the pores of the skin be entirely closed for even a brief space of time, and the poisonous matter forced back into the circulation, instant death would result. In addition to the sweat glands, the skin is provided with certain others which pour out upon it an oily substance, keeping the skin pliable and soft and protecting it from heat and cold. The blood and skin are so closely related that whatever affects one seriously interferes with the functions of the other. Not only health, but life itself, depends upon perfect harmony between the blood and skin. When, therefore, the blood becomes poisoned from any cause, it quickly Internal and External Poisons manifests itself upon the skin in the form of sores and ulcers, pimples and various eruptive diseases. By the character of the sore we are enabled to determine the nature of the poison or humor in the blood, as every disease originating in the blood has its own peculiar sore or pimple. The skin is not only affected by the poisons generated in the system, but poisons from without enter through the open glands or pores and quickly infect the blood. Mercury rubbed upon the skin will produce Rheumatism, and Poison Oak and Ivy and other wild plants gain easy access to the blood through the skin. As so-called skin diseases originate in the blood, the application of powders, soaps and washes can do no permanent good, but often do immense damage by closing up the outlet to these little tubes and interfering with the natural action of the skin. The treatment must begin with the blood, and the acid or other poisons antidoted or neutralized. S. S. S. does this and purifies the circulation, builds up the blood and flushes the little glands or pores with pure, new blood, and restores healthy action to the skin. The use of cosmetics never yet brought health and beauty to a rough, red, pimply skin or sallow complexion. What is needed is rich, pure blood, such as S. S. S. makes. It not only relieves you of all disfiguring blackheads, blotches and irritating, itching eruptions, but improves your general health. S. S. S. contains no mercury, potash, arsenic or other mineral; but is a purely vegetable remedy and the safest and best in all blood and skin troubles. Write our physicians for advice or information; they have made a study of blood and skin diseases, and you can have the best medical advice without cost. Book on Blood and Skin Diseases free.

THREE ANGELS.

They say this life is barren, drear and cold,
Ever the same sad song was sung of old,
Ever the same long weary tale is told,
And to our lips is held the cup of strife,
And yet—a little love can sweeten life.

They say our hands may grasp but joys destroyed,
Youth has but dreams, and age an aching void,
Whose Dead sea fruit long, long ago has
cloved,
Whose night with wild tempestuous storms
is rife—
And yet a little hope can brighten life.

They say we fling ourselves in wild despair
Amidst the broken treasures scattered
there,
Where all is wrecked, where all once promised fair,
And stab ourselves with sorrow's two-
edged knife,
And yet a little patience strengthens life.

Is it then true, this tale of bitter grief,
Of mortal anguish finding no relief?
Lo! midst the winter shines the laurel's
leaf:
Three angels share the lot of human strife,
Three angels glorify the path of life.

Love, Hope and Patience cheer us on our way,
Love, Hope and Patience form our spirit's
stay,
Love, Hope and Patience watch us day by day,
And bid the desert bloom with beauty
vernal,
Until the earthly fades in the eternal.

that I thought I would try it. I bought a bottle. I was soon re-

WINE OF CARDUI

There is no use talking—a baby in the house is the link that binds husband and wife together. Nothing is sadder than fruitless wedlock.
The prattling and cooing of the little ones offset a thousand times the occasional worries and trials of life. When a wife is barren, there is a derangement somewhere in the genital organs, caused by one or more of those common disorders known as "female troubles". Wine of Cardui is the remedy. It puts the organs of generation in a strong and healthy condition, fitting the wife for the sacred duty of reproducing her kind.
During the period of gestation the entire system of the expectant mother is built up to withstand the ordeal of labor, and when the little one makes its advent it is lusty and strong, well-fitted to grow to maturity in perfect health. The mother, too, passes through the trial with little pain and no dread.
Wine of Cardui is truly a wonderful medicine for women.

MONDAY, MAY 13.

THE PRESERVATION OF HISTORICAL SPOTS.

Prof. Martin H. Holt writes the Raleigh News and Observer as follows:

Yesterday in my strolls around town with some of my friends I had some difficulty in finding the home pointed out by tradition as being the birthplace and home of the boyhood of President Andrew Johnson. Knowing the general locality, I asked an intelligent looking liveryman could he tell me where Andrew Johnson had lived. "He is a tall-like man, isn't he?" was his interrogative answer. Another intelligent looking man said he couldn't really tell, but the "name sounded familiar." Finally an old colored woman pointed out the little odd-shaped house, so invested with interest on account of its association with a President of the United States.

We people of North Carolina are a plan, practical people, and do not "slop over" in the worship of celebrities, literary or political. But the city of Raleigh should by all means own the old Johnson house and preserve it forever, as object lesson for every boy in the State, no matter how humble his surroundings, to kindle his ambition to make the most of himself. The home perhaps can be bought on reasonable terms, or some benefactor might well afford to donate it to the city. It could be made the office of a historical society, and in it could be preserved autograph letters, articles of furniture, etc. etc., pertaining to Johnson, Polk, and Jackson. At the present rate of dilapidation it would soon disappear, and then it will be too late.

At Quincy, Mass., the two old "lean of John and ohn Quincy Adams, are tos," the birthplaces respectfully of John and John Quincy Adams, are scrupulously cared for by that little town, and used as the repository of all the valuable relics connected with the Adams family, which can be obtained. The reason why this was done in the long ago are plainly apparent. Obscure birth and even the whispered uncertainty of his parentage, his humble boyhood, his failure to align himself with the dominant party of the South, of our part of the country in the war between the State—all these have prevented our capital city from acknowledging him as her own except in the most cold and distant way. But as an example of the sterling force of an obscure North Carolina boy, without the aid of friends, family, or education surmounting overwhelming obstacles, to pay proper tribute to eminence growing out of North Carolina soil, to pay the difference—aye to take off our hats—to him who at the risk of impeachment dared to stand by the struggling people in the South in their efforts to make the most of ruin, our fair city should take immediate steps to preserve what is left of the home of Andrew Johnson's boyhood.

It is a trite saying that our people are too neglectful of such things, but it will bear repeating. Nearly any Northern community would have long ago secured possession of the spot referred to and held it as an object of public interest and pride. Prof. Holt is right in saying that such effort would serve to bring to the attention of the young the possibilities that lie before American boys who have only brains and pluck, which, thanks to the many blessings which providence has showered upon our country, are sufficient endowment for young men. The fact that President Johnson, going into prominence from a so-called Southern state which gave 31,000 soldiers to the Union Army, espoused the Union's cause, should not prevent our honoring him as a son of North Carolina. The fact that he sacrificed his popularity, and almost his office, in a policy of friendliness to the South, should be enough to cause us to overlook the fact that he, when the time for division came, following where his ideas of right lead, espoused the other side.

ROMANCE OF THE Y. M. C. A.

How the Organization Started in 1844—The Founder.

Few men live to see the fruition of their cherished schemes, but to Sir George Williams this singular happiness is vouchsafed. The fifty-seventh anniversary of the Young Men's Christian Association, originated by him was celebrated at the Mansion House yesterday, at a meeting presided over by the Lord Mayor, who was accompanied by the Lady Mayoress. Coming to London in 1844 from Bridgewater, Sir George Williams obtained employment as an assistant in Hitchcock's drapery establishment. He soon saw the necessity of forming some organization for getting young men to use their evenings with a serious purpose of improvement, religious and intellectual. His plan of usefulness was helped and brightened by a touch of romance. Like a good apprentice, he commended himself to his master, won the hand of his daughter in marriage, and became a partner in the firm, to which he added his name—Messrs. Hitchcock & Williams. Today the membership of the association is 537,000 representatives of every class and every nation. The various centers in view of their moral and social influence, are not inaptly described as "Cities of Refuge" for the rising generation of men, and they must be an important factor for good when it is remembered that they number 7,229, practically forming a broad belt around the world, embracing at once Iceland, where there are 24 members, and Cape Town, with probably over 3,000. In the evening some 4,000 members and their friends assembled at Exeter Hall, the guests of Sir George and Lady Williams. Referring to the early days of the association, Sir George Williams said he paid 2s. 6d. a week for the room in which the first meetings were held. Now they owned, in various parts of the world, property valued at over $5,000,000.

HIGH-PRICED DRINK.

It Cost the Purchaser Between $300 and $400.

Washington Post.

The story of what the purchaser regards as a high-priced drink is told on F street in connection with a stock transaction of Wednesday. It was a deal in Union Pacific, whose leaps and bounds still thrill the callous speculators who thronged the broker's rooms. A government employe, drawing a fat salary for the work that is not, over-exacting, was rash enough Tuesday to buy 100 shares of Union Pacific at 119, with all the nonchalance with which he would have stood a triple raise on a pair of typewriters in a big jackpot. He assembled about the board in one of the F street rooms Wednesday forenoon, and felt gratified to see Union Pacific soaring.

"Charlie," said he to an old cron, "let's go and take a drink," which proposition was accepted with alacrity. The two jogged leisurely across the street to a popular refreshment counter, and just as leisurely returned less than half hour later.

A glance at the board showed that in the meantime Union Pacific had jumped to 128 and then started downward again. The government employe on a fat salary, with visions of $900 profit in less than a day, started at breakneck speed for the business window, eager to dispose of his holdings, but he had to wait in the press, and before he could close out his stock had sagged to 124.

"That drink cost me between $300 and $400," said he mournfully. "I would have closed out at 128. But after all, I cleared $500."

MRS. MCKINLEY SICK.

The Presidential Trip Interrupted by Her Illness.

Del Monte, Cal., May 12.—Owing to the state of Mrs. McKinley's health, the President and Mrs. McKinley, accompanied by Dr. Rixey and Miss Barber, the President's niece, left here for San Francisco at 11:30 o'clock today. They will go to the residence of Henry T. Scott there, and it is hoped that the complete rest will have a beneficial effect upon Mrs. McKinley. Her condition is said not to be alarming, but she is worn out by her long journey and it was considered wise to take her to San Francisco, where she could have proper nursing and where specialists could be consulted if necessary.

The program for the party between here and San Francisco will be carried out as originally planned, and the President expects to be able to rejoin the party at San Jose to morrow afternoon, if Mrs. McKinley's condition will permit.

LATER—At 9:33 o'clock tonight, Secretary Cortelyou gave the following bulletin to the Associated Press. "Mrs. McKinley stood the trip from Monterey extremely well and is resting comfortably at Mr. Scott's residence. Her attack of indigestion it is believed will yield promptly to rest and remedies while the felon on her hand is healing nicely. Dr. Hirschfelder, of San Francisco, is in consultation with Dr. Rixey. "It will not be determined until 9 a. m., tomorrow, whether President McKinley will go to San Jose or remain in this city. His program for the day will be contingent on the condition of Mrs. McKinley at that hour."

A Slick Scheme.

Charlotte Observer.

"Speaking of schemes for getting money," said a Charlotte man the other day, "I'll tell you the slickest scheme I ever heard of. I was in Greensboro some time ago, and a rather nice looking fellow came up to me and showed me a bona fide telegram from some place in Illinois stating that his wife was dying and that he must come at once if he ever expected to see her alive again. The fellow said he was out of money and needed assistance. No man refuses an appeal of that kind and I gave him something. In two or three hours he got enough money that I knew of to buy him a ticket to Illinois. It turned out afterwards—the game being exposed—that he had a confederate in Illinois to whom he had also been wiring that his wife was dying in Greensboro. The two of them just traveled from place to place and made no end of money on the dirty game."

Sure Sign of Rain.

You have probably heard old-fashioned weather prophets say when there is a ring around the moon that it will rain in as many days as there are stars within the ring. This, like a good many of the old sayings—or superstitions, if you will—is founded on a scientific principle. A ring around the moon is caused by the diffraction of the moon's light by particles of water in the air. When the particles of water are small the ring will be large. When they are large the ring will be small. Now, the large particles cannot keep their place in the air long on account of their weight, and hence they must soon fall as rain. And therefore you have the philosophy of the old saying for the fewer stars are to be seen in a small ring than in a large one, and the sooner, therefore, may the rain be expected.

IN THE CHURCHES YESTERDAY.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS ATTEND DIVINE WORSHIP.

Rev. J. R. Scroggs Occupies the Pulpit at West Market—Christian Love the Theme of Dr. Smith's Discourse Last Night.

The pulpit at West Market Street church was occupied yesterday, both morning and night, by Rev. J. R. Scroggs, presiding elder of the Greensboro district. Before beginning his sermon in the morning, Mr. Scroggs stated that all the ministers of the Southern Methodist church had been requested to preach on the subject of missions at that particular service, by Dr. Lambuth, of Nashville, and in accordance with the request from headquarters he would preach on the subject. He chose as his text the parable of the feeding of the five thousand, and from it preached a forcible sermon, and one that was enjoyed by all who heard him.

In treating of the parable he said, "Everything that Christ did while on earth, however small and insignificant it may seem to have been, was really done on a large scale. His command to the disciples to feed the multitude comes to us at the present time, 'Evangelize the world.' He gave his disciples the humanity impossible to do when he sent them out to heal the sick, give sight to the blind, cast out devils, and raise the dead. And after his resurrection he sent them out on a mission that involved the moral and almost social revolution of the race, to reach the gospel to every creature."

"A member of the English Parliament once introduced a bill to evangelize a section of the country, and another member arose and said, 'That is not the question.' The reply came back, 'It is the only question. There is none other.'

"When Christ told his disciples to feed the multitudes they immediately enquired into their resources to see if they could do it. The disciples made a mistake here and the Church today is making the same mistake. When Christ commands them to evangelize the world they commence to take statistics to see if it can be done. In commanding it Christ reveals the possibilities of its accomplishment. The angels in heaven cannot take the statistics of West Market church. It has resources that cannot be calculated and cannot be weighed. It has resources sufficient to evangelize the United States. The disciples wanted to send the multitudes away and let them find food for themselves. And this same spirit is manifested today towards the heathen, to let them take care of themselves.

"The problem is before us. In resources the Church is rich every way. The solution of the problem has been given us by Christ, who says, 'bring what ye have.' And Christ is speaking to us today in tones louder than he has ever spoken before, 'Feed the multitudes, evangelize the race, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.'

The sermon was listened to with close attention by the large congregation present. A feature of the service was the offertory, a solo by Mrs. Lee of Durham.

Dr. Egbert Smith preached an able sermon at the First Presbyterian church last night, on the subject of Christian love. He chose as his subject the incident of Christ's washing the disciples feet, and began his discourse by saying that every one was agreed that the greatest thing is love, and by quoting St. Paul's utterances concerning it. Genuine Christian love is shown by Christ in his act of washing the disciple's feet. And this act is held up to us by the Lord as an example for us to follow. We learn from this lesson.

1. "True Christian love will gladly stoop to the most menial service in order to benefit others. This service rendered by the Lord, was not only an humble but a very necessary act. Any one who has ever walked a long distance in the summer over mountains, and suddenly came to a sparkling stream and stopped and bathed their feet, can realize the benefit of the act. And in the east it was much more necessary. There the washing of the feet in the evening was as much a necessity as is the washing of the face in the morning in this country. When the twelve were gathered together, doubtless, water had been prepared for them, and probably they were each in turn, accustomed to washing the feet of the others. But on this occasion they were puffed up with pride, quarrelling among themselves as to who should be the greatest among them, and the Lord answered their questions by bathing their feet and telling them that he who would be greatest among them must become the servant of them all. Whenever a person thinks their dignity won't allow their performing a service that will wipe some weeping eye, Satan laughs at the sight. The only thing that is beneath true dignity is sin.

2. "That true Christian love renders spontaneous and willing service. A soldier who has to be beaten, in order to compel him to fight the enemy, cannot be brave, and Christians who have to be urged and begged into service, cannot have much love in their hearts for Christ. If we would be like the Master, whenever there is anything to do we must feel it a call upon us to fill, for he has given us an example that we might do as he has done.

3. "True Christian love pours itself upon the evil and the unworthy. The difference between worldly and Christian love is that the worldly love returns good to those who give them good, and the Christian love is to be perfect as your Father is perfect, for he maketh the sun to shine upon the evil as well as the good."

"The lesson that comes to us is that happiness lies not in knowing the beauty of love, but in doing the deeds of love. The Savior says, 'happy are ye if ye know these things and do them.'"

The speaker held the close attention of the large audience present, throughout his discourse. At the conclusion of the sermon, a quartette sang "Jesus I Come." The quartette was composed of Mr. W. M. Ridenhour, and Mr. G. A. Rankin.

GOOD FOR FARMING.

Alaska Affords Promising Outlook for the Agriculturist.

Prof. Georgeeson, Special Agent of United States Agricultural Department, Says That Grains and Flax Grow Well There.

Prof. C. C. Georgeeson, special agent of the United States agricultural department in charge of the experimental station in Alaska, at Sitka, has returned from the north for the purpose of making his annual report to the government. He has proved that Alaska will ultimately be as promising a field for agriculture and stock raising as it is now for mining. He was sent to the north in May, 1898, and his first work was to ascertain what could be produced there in the way of vegetables. He succeeded in raising choice barley and oats. Speaking of his experiments in Alaska, Prof. Georgeeson said: "There is not the slightest doubt that grain can be matured almost anywhere in Alaska. I have obtained this year samples of perfectly ripe barley, oats, wheat and rye from several points in the interior as far north as Eagle. These grains were grown and matured there this year. With one exception they were volunteer products from seed accidentally scattered and grown wild. If grains will grow and mature without culture, it stands to reason that they will grow and improve with culture."

"I also grew flax at Sitka the first year. It attained a height of more than three feet, matured seed and produced a fiber of excellent quality. There is no doubt that flax can be made a successful crop in the coast region of Alaska. My instructions the first year were to examine the coast region and reserve lands for experiment stations at suitable places. With this end in view we started a station at Kenai, on the Kenai peninsula, in Cook Inlet. We made a reservation of 320 acres there, some of which has been cleared and has matured grain successfully."

The advantage of a canal or navigable channel through the isthmus of Panama is so obvious that it is not surprising to find the idea of such a waterway was seriously considered in the early days of Spanish conquest in the new world, says the Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

In the year 1527 the famous Cortes, being then in Mexico (or New Spain), sent three ships on a voyage to the Moluccas in charge of Alvaro De Saavedra. The expedition was an unfortunate one, as two of the ships were lost on the outward voyage, and Saavedra did not live to carry out his intention of returning by way of the city of Panama, on the Pacific side, and thence across the isthmus. His view was that at Panama he "might unlade the cloves and merchandise that he had, that so in carter it might be carried across the planes four leagues, to the river Chagre, which they say is navigable, running out into the North sea not far from Nombre de Dios, where the ships ride which come out of Spain."

In his "Discoveries of the World" published in 1555 and translated by Hakluyt and published in England in 1601, Antonio Galvano, governor of Ternate, in the Moluccas, says of Saavedra:

"If he had lived he meant to have opened the land of Castilia de Oro and New Spain from sea to sea, which might have been done in four places—namely, from the Gulf of St. Michael to Uraba, which is 25 leagues, or from Panama to Nombre de Dios, being 17 leagues distant; or through Zaquator, a river of Nicaragua, which springeth out of a lake three or four leagues from the South sea, and falleth into the North sea; whereupon doe saile great barks and crayers. The other place is from Tecoaatepec, the river of Vera Cruz in the Bay of Honduras, which also might be opened in a straight, which, if it were done, then they might saile from the Canaries into the Malucos under the zodiack in a temperate climate, in lesse time and with much lesse danger, than to saile through the Cape of Bona Speranza or by the Strait of Magellan, or by the northwest."

NAME FOR KODOL.

The only instance on record when a postoffice has been named after a patent medicine, was last year, when in Wetzel county, W. Va., a new postoffice was established and named Kodol, after the famous Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, manufactured by E. C. DeWitt & Co., of Chicago. It had given such satisfactory results that the name was unanimously selected by the people for the new office and adopted by the department at Washington, D. C.

wander when the brain is tired. Overwork, nervous irritation, worry and mental strain exhaust the brain forces and diminish their thought power. "Several years of sick headache and stomach trouble brought on nervous prostration and for a long time I could not concentrate my thoughts. After taking a few bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine I was completely cured."

If people only knew what we know about Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, it would be used in nearly every household, as there are few people who do not suffer from a feeling of fullness after eating, belching, flatulence, sour stomach or waterbrash, caused by indigestion or dyspepsia. A preparation such as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which, with no aid from the stomach, will digest your food, certainly can't help but do you good.

Women are Like Flowers.

Healthy and strong they blossom and bloom. Sickly, they wither and die. Every woman ought to look well and feel well. It's her right and duty, but she might as well try to put out a fire with oil as to be healthy and attractive with disease corroding the organs that make her a woman. Upon their health depends her health. If there is inflammation or weakening drains or suffering at the monthly period, attend to it at once. Don't delay. You're one step nearer the grave every day you put it off. Women can stand a great deal, but they cannot live forever with disease dragging at the most delicate and vital organs in their body. You may have been deceived in so-called cures. We don't see how you could help it—there is so much worthless stuff on the market. But you won't be disappointed in Bradfield's Female Regulator. We believe it is the one medicine on earth for womanly ills. There is as much difference between it and other so-called remedies as there is between right and wrong. Bradfield's Female Regulator soothes the pain, stops the drains, promotes regularity, strengthens, purifies and cleanses. It does all this quickly and easily and naturally. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. Bradfield's Regulator lies at hand. $1 per bottle at drug store. Send for our free booklet.

THE STATUE.

The marble waits, immaculate and rude;
Beside it stands the sculptor, lost in dreams.
With vague, chaotic forms, his vision
teems.
Fair shapes pursue him, only to elude
And mock his eager fancy. Lines of grace
And heavenly beauty vanish, and, behold!
Out through the Parian luster, pure and cold,
Glances the wild horror of a devil's face.
The clay is ready for the modeling.
The marble waits; how beautiful, how pure,
That gleaming substance, and it shall endure
When dynasty and empire, throne and king
Have crumbled back to dust. Well may you pause,
Oh, sculptor artist! and, before that mute,
Unshapen surface, stand irresolute!
Awful, indeed, are art's unchanging laws.
The thing you fashion out of senseless
clay,
Transformed to marble, shall outlive
your fame;
And, when no more is known your race,
or name
Men shall be moved by what you mold
to-day.
We all are sculptors. By each act and thought,
We form the model. Time, the artisan, stands, with his chisel, fashioning the Man,
And stroke by stroke the masterpiece is wrought.
Angel or demon? Choose, and do not err!
For time but follows as you shape the mold.
And finishes in marble, stern and cold,
That statue of the soul, the character.
By wordless blessing, or by silent curse,
By act and motive—so do you define
The image which time copies line by line.
For the great gallery of the Universe.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in Success.

A Perfectly Model Man

By Ella Higginson.

SHE lay there alone in the dark.
It was near midnight. When the lights had been dimmed throughout the house, and stillness had settled upon everything, he had arisen in unbearable suffering and gone softly down stairs. It was her last night in the house, whose every chair and curtain seemed to thrill as he passed, and he must be nearer the room in which she lay asleep—forevermore asleep.
He threw himself upon a couch in the hall. He lay on his back with one arm thrown over his eyes. He was trembling like an old, old man—or like a dog that lies out in the cold and wet and hears a fire crackling within the house.
A fine rain was beating ceaselessly against the windows and doors. The climbing rose against the side of the house moved its arms as the wind bore down upon it. It had not been a month since she had asked him to tuck it more securely, as the autumn winds were coming on; and he had replied that he would do it some other time—he had an engagement now. The engagement had been to play billiards
with a man for whom he cared nothing. She was standing on the steps in her pale blue gown, with tacks and bits of leather and a long-handled hammer in her hands. He recalled the cloud of disappointment that had drifted suddenly across her face. The following morning he had observed that the vine was tacked in place, and he had not thought of it again. Until now! Why on earth should he think of it now?
Was not his anguish deep enough? Why could he not remember rather the things he had done to make her happy—the pleasant home he had given her, the jewels, the pretty gowns, the carriage—ah, the carriage! His heart opened and closed suddenly. The carriage in which she seemed to take no

pleasure because he never went driving with her! He had told her that he was too busy! Good God! his heart cried out roughly, why need he have lied to her? She must have known then that he was lying to her; surely,
she knew it now.

Presently he became aware that two women had entered an adjoining room.
They drew their chairs to the fire and sewed and talked. The door leading into the dark hall was open. It seemed good to him—less lonely—that they should be there. They spoke in un-hushed voices, as if to make it more cheerful for themselves.

"Well," said one, after they had talked of other things, biting a thread and rolling the end between her thumb and forefinger, "she had everything that heart could want. He's a good man, an'
he was mighty good to her." She bent toward the lamp to thread her needle.
Her eyelids flickered close together.
Tiny wrinkles ran around her eyes.

The other woman was silent.

"Yes," continued Mrs. Gregg, beginning to sew, "there ain't many men as good to a woman's he was. She had a nice home, all furnished up nice—w'y, that sideboard alone cost $200 if it cost a cent! She had a cook an' a second girl—I never could see why they call 'em second girls—an' a carriage, an' fine jewelry, an' dresses. She had a plenty o' spending money besides."

The other woman was silent. Why did she not speak. He lifted his head and looked at her. She rocked back and forth as she sewed. Her eyes were on her work. He knew her well—a poor neighbor to whom his wife had given much sewing and of whom she had always been fond. Only a few hours before her death she had spoken to him
of this woman. "You'll do something for her sometimes, dearest," she had whispered, even after speech was a difficult thing for her. "Do little things for her and the children—and do them delicately—so you will not hurt—
her—" She had sunk back in his arms, exhausted, and finished the sentence
with a smile.

"Look at her front door," went on Mrs. Gregg. "She wanted a fine one, an'
she got it. She got every blessed thing she took a notion for, from a burglar-proof closet for her silverware to a Poppa Gonteer rosebush. You got that seam done, Mis' Medea?"

Mrs. Medcalf held up the seam to show that it lacked several inches of being finished.

"Oh, you'll soon have it done. It's a pity she ain't got any children. He'll be so much more lonesome, a-comin'
home at night an' not findin' anybody
here."

Then of a sudden the other woman spoke: "I reckon he won't be any lone-somer'n she's been all these years,
a-settin' here alone, night after night,
till 11 o'clock."

No knife ever sent a more sickening pain through a heart than those words sent through the heart of the man who lay there in the dark and heard.

"Hum—er—hum," said Mrs. Gregg.
"I expect it did get kind of lonesome for her. He—he—that is, I guess he did have to stay downtown most of the time. But he didn't have any bad habits—didn't drink or gamble or look at other women. He was a perfectly model husband."

GIRL TRIPLETS IN SOCIETY.

Three Handsome Young Women, Who Look, Act and Dress Alike, the Latest Society Puzzle.

Miss Edith Cryder, Miss Ethel Cryder and Miss Elsie Cryder, triplets, who were 18 on December 1, were introduced to New York society the other afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Cryder giving a dinner at their home, 43 West Ninth street, for their daughters. Twenty-six young people were the guests. The Misses Cryder are so strikingly similar in appearance that only their family and most intimate friends can tell them apart. For this reason when they appear in public each wears a ribbon around her neck that is distinctive in color. Otherwise their dress is identical.

While boring for a well near Lake, Mich., on the farm of Frank Fowler, the workmen struck a stratum of sand at a depth of 110 feet. In a few moments the well began to spout sand, which rose in a cloud several feet above the nozzle, like a fountain, and was scattered by the wind.

Every year now, we have more new laws than John Marshall considered during the entire 34 years that he was on the supreme bench. We have laws passed by congress; laws passed by state legislatures; laws passed by city councils; and all sorts of minor regulations which mount up into the tens of thousands during the 12 months, says the Saturday Evening Post.

The variety of these is as great as the number. There are laws regulating dogs and laws concerning elephants; laws about English sparrows and laws about the great American eagle. There are laws affecting everything from microbes to mammals, from politics to love. A hundred Marshalls would be unable to consider every one of them or get from them much more than a fine case of nervous prostration or despair.
